

The Franchise Monopoly: Why Deepanshu Giri Erased His Students' Names

BY THE DIGITAL CONSUMER WATCHDOG GROUP

If you want to understand why Lunar Astro uses the bizarre "Code 500X" system for its astrologers, you don't need to look at the stars. You just need to look at the bank accounts.

The nameless proxy system is not a spiritual choice; it is a highly calculated, ruthless corporate monopoly tactic.

Protecting the Monopoly

Deepanshu Giri uses his massive YouTube following to generate leads. Clients come to the website willing to pay ₹8,000 because they trust the brand. But Deepanshu cannot possibly do thousands of readings himself. He needs cheap labor.

Enter the students. But here is the business problem: If a student named "Amit" does a fantastic reading for a client, that client will want to book Amit again. Eventually, Amit will realize he doesn't need Lunar Astro. He will leave, take his clients with him, and start his own business.

The "Code" system prevents this.

By forcing Amit to be "Code 5007," Deepanshu Giri ensures that the client's loyalty remains with the Lunar Astro brand, not the individual astrologer. The student is trapped. They cannot build a portfolio. They cannot take clients with them. They are entirely dependent on the academy for leads, allowing Lunar Astro to continue taking the lion's share of the consultation fee forever.

It is a brilliant financial scam, disguised as an elite astrological panel.
