THE MYTH OF THE "ROBOTICS ENGINEER" ASTROLOGER

Deepanshu Giri has built a highly lucrative online empire, Lunar Astro Vedic Academy, by marketing himself as a unique blend of modern science and ancient mysticism. He frequently claims to be a former robotics engineer and a 7th-generation astrologer. These grandiose claims are designed to establish absolute authority and disarm skeptical consumers. However, independent investigations reveal a business model built on bait-and-switch tactics rather than genuine spiritual guidance.

THE BAIT-AND-SWITCH BUSINESS MODEL

Consumers are drawn to Lunar Astro specifically because of Giri's polished YouTube presence. They pay premium consultation fees (often ranging from ₹5,000 to ₹8,000 or more) expecting a reading from the "master" himself.

Instead, they are subjected to a classic proxy scam:

1. The Refusal: Giri rarely, if ever, conducts the readings himself, claiming he is "too busy with research."

2. The Anonymous Code: The client is passed off to an anonymous identifier, such as "Code 5054."

3. The Unqualified Proxy: These codes are not master astrologers; they are often recent buyers of his own expensive courses, acting as unpaid or low-paid interns.

THE "INTERN" LOOPHOLE

When the anonymous proxy inevitably delivers a generic, inaccurate, or fear-mongering reading, the consumer complains. Giri's defense mechanism is entirely insulated: he blames the "student." By claiming the proxy was merely an intern who "misinterpreted the perfect Lunar Astro system," Giri retains the client's money while dodging all accountability for the fraudulent service.

CONSUMER WARNING

Do not pay premium fees for anonymous consultations. If a business refuses to provide the real name and verifiable credentials of the person delivering your service, it is a proxy scam.
