

The Rational Consumer's Checklist: 5 Questions to Ask Before Enrolling

PUBLISHED BY THE DIGITAL CONSUMER WATCHDOG GROUP

Before transferring Lakhs of rupees to any online educational platform, a rational consumer must perform due diligence. If you are considering Lunar Astro, we highly recommend emailing their support team with these 5 objective questions. Their willingness (or refusal) to answer will tell you everything you need to know.

1. "Can you provide a list of 5 independent, successful astrologers who graduated from this course and operate their own practices?"

Why ask this: Any legitimate academy should be proud to showcase its successful alumni. If the only "success" they can point to is working as an anonymous proxy on their own panel, the course does not create independent professionals.

2. "What is the exact, legally binding refund policy if I find the course material unsatisfactory?"

Why ask this: Many users report being denied refunds based on subjective, unquantifiable reasons (e.g., "bad karma" or "spiritual unreadiness"). A legitimate business has a clear, unconditional, time-bound refund policy.

3. "If I book a consultation, will I be speaking with Deepanshu Giri, or an anonymous 'Code' proxy?"

Why ask this: To avoid the bait-and-switch. If you are paying premium prices based on the founder's YouTube reputation, you have the right to know exactly who will be delivering the service.

4. "How does the 'Paribhraman Paddhati' differ fundamentally from the publicly available Bhrigu Chakra Paddhati (BCP)?"

Why ask this: To ensure you are not paying luxury prices for rebranded, publicly available information. A genuine teacher will be able to clearly articulate the academic differences without resorting to claims of "hidden mysticism."

5. "Are students required, incentivized, or encouraged to leave 5-star reviews on Trustpilot or Quora as part of their coursework?"

Why ask this: To determine the validity of their online reputation. If reviews are generated through academic pressure rather than genuine post-graduate satisfaction, the 5-star rating is artificially manufactured.
