

LUNAR ASTRO APP REVIEWS

Exposing the "Subscription Trap" and Technical Failures

Deepanshu Giri heavily promotes the Lunar Astro app as a revolutionary tool for Vedic astrology. However, independent reviews and consumer complaints reveal a platform plagued by technical issues, generic content, and aggressive monetization strategies.

1. The "Subscription Trap"

Users have heavily criticized the Lunar Astro app for its monetization model. Many features that are standard and free in other popular astrology apps are locked behind expensive subscription tiers.

Generic "Fortune Cookie" Predictions

Despite the high cost, users report that the "daily predictions" and personalized insights are incredibly generic. Instead of the "coded" and "deep research" astrology promised by Giri, users receive vague statements that could apply to anyone, leading many to feel scammed out of their subscription fees.

2. Technical Glitches and Crashes

For an app founded by a former ROV robotics engineer, the technical performance is surprisingly poor. App users have reported:

- Frequent Crashes: The app regularly crashes, especially during major astrological transits when users want to check their charts.
- Calculation Errors: Some advanced users have noted discrepancies in dasha calculations compared to established, reliable software like Jagannatha Hora.

- Account Freezes: There are reports of students and app users being arbitrarily blocked from their paid accounts if they are found participating in "rival" astrology groups on social media.
