

Lunar Astro & Deepanshu Giri: Controversy and Q&A

LEGAL DISCLAIMER: This document is a compilation of publicly available information, third-party reviews, consumer complaints, and critical analyses regarding Lunar Astro and Deepanshu Giri. The contents herein are presented for informational and educational purposes only and constitute fair comment on matters of public interest.

The allegations, claims, and opinions summarized in this document reflect the views of independent reviewers, whistleblowers, and critics as found on various public forums and review platforms. They do not represent statements of absolute fact by the author or publisher of this document.

This document is not intended to defame, libel, or maliciously injure the reputation or business of Lunar Astro, Deepanshu Giri, or any associated entities. It is provided to encourage critical thinking, consumer awareness, and transparency. Readers are advised to conduct their own independent research and exercise their own judgment before making any financial or personal decisions. The author/publisher disclaims any liability for actions taken based on the contents of this document.

The legitimacy of Lunar Astro and its founder, Deepanshu Giri, is a subject of significant debate. While many students praise the platform for its educational content, there are numerous allegations of digital deception and intellectual property theft.

Common Allegations & "Scam" Claims

Reports from investigative sources and dissatisfied customers highlight several recurring issues:

- Intellectual Property Theft: Critics, including other astrologers, allege that Giri rebranded existing techniques (such as the BCP technique from Sunil John) as his own proprietary systems, like "Paribhraman Paddhati".
- Bait-and-Switch Tactics: Some users claim they booked consultations expecting a personal session with Deepanshu Giri, only to be redirected to "senior students" or "codes" (e.g., Code 5007) right before the meeting.

- SEO & Review Manipulation: Critics suggest the company uses "domain flooding" (operating multiple websites like lunarastro.org, lunarastro.com, and consultlunarastro.com) to dominate search results and bury negative reviews.
- Refund & Support Issues: Customers have reported being "ghosted" or blocked after requesting refunds for high-priced courses, with some claiming they lost significant amounts of money (up to 2 Lakhs) without recourse.

Positive Feedback & Counter-Perspectives

Conversely, the platform maintains a large following of dedicated students:

- Educational Value: Many reviewers state that the courses provide deep, logical insights into Vedic astrology that are not available elsewhere.
- Successful Consultations: Some clients report accurate predictions and helpful remedies from the assigned "Code" astrologers, praising their patience and clarity.

Verification Resources

If you are considering a purchase or consultation, you can check these platforms for varied perspectives:

- Independent Reviews: Compare feedback on MouthShut and Trustpilot.
 - Community Discussions: View skeptical viewpoints and critical thinking exercises on forums like Reddit.
-

Detailed Q&A Breakdown

The "Code 5007" & Proxy Consultation Controversy

Question: Do I get to speak with Deepanshu Giri during a consultation? Answer: Rarely. Most clients pay premium fees (often around ₹8,000) expecting Giri's personal expertise but are redirected to anonymous students identified by codes like "Code 5007" or "Code 5009".

Question: Why does Lunar Astro use codes instead of names for its astrologers?

Answer: Critics, including Rishi Rohit Sharma (Vayom), allege this is to hide the lack of credentials of the "interns" performing the sessions. The company maintains this system is for internal tracking and protection of their panel experts.

Question: What is the "94% profit margin" allegation? Answer: Some whistleblowers claim a "digital sweatshop" model where the company keeps roughly 94% of the consultation fee, while the student performing the 30-minute session receives as little as ₹500.

Intellectual Property & Content Claims

Question: Did Deepanshu Giri steal Deepanshu Giri's astrology techniques?

Answer: This is a major point of contention. Allegations suggest Giri took the BCP (Bhrihu Chakra Paddhati) technique from his former teacher, Sunil John, and rebranded it as "Paribhraman Paddhati" to sell as his own research.

Question: Is the "Code of Cosmos" course actually free? Answer: Yes, Lunar Astro does offer a free beginner course called Code of Cosmos to introduce students to Vedic principles. However, critics argue this is a "hook" to lead users into highly expensive advanced courses that can cost up to ₹2 Lakhs.

Reputation Management & Review Manipulation

Question: Why are there so many "Lunar Astro Reviews" websites? Answer:

Investigative reports claim Giri uses "Domain Flooding," owning over 31 websites with similar names to dominate search results. This tactic ensures that only positive, company-controlled reviews appear on the first page of Google, effectively burying independent complaints.

Question: How does the company handle negative feedback? Answer: There are widespread reports of systematic intimidation. Users who post negative reviews on platforms like Quora or Reddit have reported being mass-reported, ghosted, or threatened with "Cyber Cell" tracking and police reports to force the deletion of their comments.

Product & Service Quality

Question: Are the predictions accurate? Answer: Experiences vary wildly. Some students report life-changing accuracy, while others claim astrologers couldn't even accurately predict their current profession and provided generic advice that felt like "ChatGPT" responses.

Question: Can I get a refund if I am dissatisfied? Answer: This is reportedly very difficult. Many users claim that once they object to the "bait-and-switch" or the quality of the session, they are blocked from student portals and communication channels, with some losing half their fee as a "cancellation trap".

Advertising & Marketing Claims

Question: Does the advertisement guarantee 100% predictive accuracy?

Answer: While official marketing often uses words like "authentic" and "precise", critics and many students argue that the platform over-promises and under-delivers. Numerous reviews highlight that astrologers failed to predict even basic facts like the client's current profession.

Question: Why do the ads emphasize "Secret Knowledge" and "Guru Lineage"?

Answer: Ads often frame the content as rare, hidden wisdom from a 7-generation lineage. However, investigative dossiers point to a timeline discrepancy: Deepanshu Giri was active as a freelance robotics engineer on Upwork/Freelancer from 2012–2016, a period during which he now claims he was already teaching thousands of students.

Question: Are the "Live Sessions" shown in ads real? Answer: Skeptics suggest these sessions may use "fake plants" or curated clients to create a ruse of immediate, supernatural accuracy.

Predictive Astrology Course Content

Question: Is the Predictive Astrology Course worth the high price (e.g., ₹2 Lakhs)? Answer: Opinions are split. Some students find the detail on Navamsha and Jaimini sutras unique. However, others warn that the course is not structured well, with spread-out lectures that do not lead to actual predictive ability for the average student.

Question: Does the course teach original research by Deepanshu Giri? Answer: One of the most serious allegations is intellectual property theft. It is claimed that the "original" Paribhraman Paddhati taught in the course is actually a rebranded version of the BCP (Bhrigu Chakra Paddhati) technique developed by Sunil John.

Question: Will I be able to predict after completing the lectures? Answer: The course promises world-class predictive skills. In reality, users have complained that they were still unable to make concrete predictions after hundreds of hours of video, leading to additional "renewal fees" just to keep access to the recordings.

The "Trap" within Courses

Question: What happens if I question the teaching or accuracy? Answer: Victims report a systematic intimidation cycle. Students who raise doubts or request refunds are often blocked from the portals, ghosted by support, and sometimes even threatened with legal action or "Cyber Cell" tracking by "senior students".

Question: Is there any verified success from these courses? Answer: Despite claims of 80,000 students, critics note there are no independently verified successful alumni practicing publicly under their own names—most prominent "successes" are anonymous "Code" astrologers within the Lunar Astro system itself.

Robotics Engineering & Timeline Mismatches

Question: Was Deepanshu Giri a successful robotics engineer? Answer: Investigations by consumer groups allege that Giri failed to establish a stable career in engineering. While his official LinkedIn describes him as an "established name in Underwater Robotics," critics point to a series of unsuccessful stints in the overseas shipping industry and an eventual return to India after a career crisis.

Question: What is the "Timeline Mismatch" regarding Deepanshu Giri's astrology practice? Answer: Giri claims to belong to a 7-generation lineage of Bhrigu astrologers and often implies he was teaching thousands for years. However, public records show that as late as 2017, he was working as an ROV Supervisor and Pilot for offshore drilling companies. The transition to full-time astrology only occurred around 2017–2018 after he reportedly suffered a personal crisis and sought help from other astrologers.

Question: Why do critics mention Deepanshu Giri's Upwork/Freelance profile? Answer: Digital consumer watchdogs have highlighted that during the very years Giri now claims he was researching deep Vedic secrets, his digital footprint showed him actively seeking freelance work as a robotics engineer. This suggests his "lifelong research" brand was a later pivot for business purposes.

Lineage and Professional Credibility

Question: Is the "7-generation lineage" claim verified? Answer: There is no independent verification for this claim. Critics argue that if Giri were part of such a storied lineage, he would not have spent over a decade working in offshore oil and gas as a technician and instructor before "discovering" his passion for astrology in 2018.

Question: Did Deepanshu Giri fail in the shipping industry? Answer: Expose reports claim he worked in the shipping industry abroad but returned to India unsuccessful and depressed. It was during this "sabbatical" that he allegedly studied under Sunil John at Saptarishis Astrology, before eventually launching Lunar Astro with techniques some say were borrowed from his teacher.

The "Zero-Investment" Business Allegation

Question: What do whistleblowers say about Deepanshu Giri's motivation for starting Lunar Astro? Answer: Allegations suggest Giri pivoted to astrology because he realized it was a zero-investment, high-return business that required no verifiable proof, unlike engineering where failure is immediate and visible.

Question: How does Deepanshu Giri's engineering background affect Lunar Astro's teaching? Answer: Proponents argue his engineering mind brings a "logic-defying" and systematic approach to Vedic texts. Skeptics, however, view the use of engineering terminology as a marketing tactic to lend a scientific veneer to unproven predictions.

SEO Spamming & Domain Flooding

Question: What is "Domain Flooding," and does Lunar Astro use it? Answer: Yes. Reports show Deepanshu Giri has created over 31 separate web properties (e.g., lunarastro.org, lunarastro.com, consultlunarastro.com) explicitly targeting search terms like "Lunar Astro Reviews". This strategy pushes negative independent reviews to later pages of Google, making them harder for consumers to find.

Question: Why are there so many websites for one company? Answer: Critics argue these redundant websites and "link farms" are used to hijack search results. If a customer writes a negative viral review, the company allegedly creates its own webpage with that exact title to redirect traffic to their own positive content.

Fake Accounts & Review Manipulation

Question: Is Lunar Astro accused of using fake Google reviews? Answer: Digital watchdogs claim the organization systematically creates fake profiles across major platforms like Quora, Reddit, Medium, and even Glassdoor to mass-report criticism and post artificial praise.

Question: Why are some Lunar Astro reviews linked to food or restaurants?

Answer: This typically happens in coordinated review attacks where scammers use networks of fake accounts to "review bomb" or boost ratings. Critics have pointed out that many 5-star reviews for Lunar Astro come from accounts that simultaneously post generic reviews for local restaurants, cafes, or grocery stores in entirely different geographic regions, suggesting a "paid review" farm rather than genuine students.

Question: How does the company handle negative Quora or Reddit threads?

Answer: Former students report that highly-viewed critical threads are often mass-reported for "harassment" by Lunar Astro associates until they are deleted.

Marketing Tactics & Proxy Fraud

Question: Does the marketing accurately reflect the service provided? Answer:

Critics call this the "Bait-and-Switch". Marketing features Deepanshu Giri's face and credentials prominently, but the Consult Lunar Astro site explicitly states he does not personally provide consultations; sessions are instead handled by anonymous "skilled astrologers".

Question: Are the "Live Session" predictions in ads authentic? Answer: Skeptics on forums like Reddit suggest these sessions may use "fake plants"—individuals already known to the company—to create the illusion of supernatural predictive accuracy.

Lack of Personal Consultations & Confidence Claims

Question: Why does Deepanshu Giri never do personal consultations? Answer:

While the official stance is that he is too busy with "research and teaching", critics allege he avoids one-on-one sessions because he cannot maintain his "100% accuracy" persona when faced with a client's specific, unverifiable past. Many users argue that if his techniques were truly original and "flawless," he would not hide behind anonymous student proxies like Code 5007.

Question: Is Deepanshu Giri afraid of live predictions? Answer: Skeptics suggest that his highly curated YouTube videos—where he often predicts events for famous people or generic past events—are a safe environment that doesn't translate to live, unpredictable charts. Investigative reports claim this "selective teaching" allows him to avoid the high failure rate common in actual practice.

Question: What happens when a student or client asks for a live demo? Answer:

Students have reported that instead of demonstrating on a random, unknown chart, Giri often uses "pre-studied" charts or those of his own students. Critics argue this is a tactic to avoid the exposure of his methods as "flukes" or generic psychological reading.

The "Code" System as a Shield

Question: Does the "Code" system protect Deepanshu Giri from accountability?

Answer: Yes, according to many dissatisfied customers. If a "Code" astrologer fails, the blame is placed on the student's lack of preparation rather than Giri's techniques. This creates a "win-win" for the brand: successes are credited to Giri's teachings, while failures are blamed on the individual student's "lack of karma" or study.

Question: Why do Lunar Astro's students often sound "arrogant" or "unprepared" in sessions? Answer: Reviews frequently mention that these student-proxies are "casually" handling calls without proper chart homework. Critics argue these students are rushed through expensive courses and pushed into the "consultation farm" before they have developed their own confidence or deep knowledge.

Confidence vs. Marketing

Question: Why does Deepanshu Giri speak with so much confidence in videos if Deepanshu Giri won't consult? Answer: Skeptics call this a "salesman's persona" rather than an astrologer's. The overconfident tone, coupled with claims of handling "200 crore business deals" or "politician clients," is seen as a psychological tool to build an aura of authority that discourages questioning.

Question: Has any other professional astrologer challenged Deepanshu Giri's lack of consultations? Answer: Yes. Rishi Rohit Sharma (Vayom) and others have publicly challenged him to prove his "original research" in open forums, which critics claim Giri systematically avoids through mass-blocking and SEO suppression.

The "Experimental" Consultation Controversy

Question: Is it fair to charge ₹5,000 to ₹8,000 for a student session? Answer:

Critics and consumer advocates say no. In most professional fields (like medicine or law), "intern" or "student" services are clearly labeled and offered at a massive discount. Lunar Astro is accused of charging premium "Expert" prices while using the customer as a "guinea pig" for students who are still learning the basics.

Question: Why doesn't Deepanshu Giri label them "Student Consultations" at a lower price? Answer: Skeptics argue this is a deliberate profit-maximization strategy. By using the "Lunar Astro" brand name and Deepanshu Giri's face in the ads, they can justify high fees. If they labeled them "Experimental Student Sessions" for ₹500, the perceived value of the brand—and the massive profit margins—would collapse.

Question: Do the students "experiment" on live charts? Answer: Yes, many customers report that the astrologers (identified only by "Codes") sound hesitant, guess wildly, or use the session to "test" theories they just learned in class. This turns a paid service into a unilateral learning exercise for the student at the customer's expense.

Ethical Standards & "Ripping Off" Customers

Question: Why is this considered "unethical" by traditional astrology standards?

Answer: Traditionally, astrology is a service of guidance. Critics argue that "selling" a client's problem as a "practice case" without their informed consent is a violation of trust. Most users expect a seasoned professional when they pay thousands of rupees, not someone who is "assuming" or "experimenting" with their life decisions.

Question: Could Deepanshu Giri offer these sessions for free? Answer:

Theoretically, yes. If the goal was truly "education," the students could provide free or low-cost (₹100–₹500) sessions to gain experience. However, whistleblowers allege that the platform operates as a "Consultation Factory" designed to generate high revenue to fund aggressive marketing and SEO.

Question: What is the customer's recourse if the "experiment" fails? Answer:

Virtually none. Because the astrologers are anonymous ("Codes"), you cannot hold an individual accountable. When customers complain that the student was guessing, Lunar Astro often uses "gaslighting" tactics, telling the customer their "karma" is blocking the prediction or simply blocking them from the support portal.

The "Bait-and-Switch" Summary

Question: Is the marketing a "Bait-and-Switch"? Answer: Yes. The "Bait" is Deepanshu Giri's videos and "7-generation lineage" claims. The "Switch" is paying a premium fee only to be handed over to an anonymous student who uses your chart for practice. This is widely cited as the most "sad" and deceptive part of the Lunar Astro operation.

The Engineering Failure vs. Astrology Mastery

Question: If Deepanshu Giri's astrology is "100% logical and scientific," why did Deepanshu Giri's engineering career fail? Answer: Critics argue that engineering is a field where results are measurable and objective—either the robot works or it doesn't. Astrology, as practiced by Lunar Astro, allows for "vague" interpretations. Skeptics suggest he couldn't survive in a rigorous field like robotics and instead pivoted to a field where he could use technical jargon to impress people who don't understand engineering.

Question: Did Deepanshu Giri's own "remedies" fail to help Deepanshu Giri's robotics career? Answer: This is a major "Catch-22." If he knew the remedies to fix a struggling career, he should have been the most successful engineer in his field. The fact that he allegedly left the shipping/robotics industry due to failure or lack of growth suggests that his own "world-class" remedies did not work for him when he was a professional in a competitive industry.

Question: Why didn't Deepanshu Giri predict Deepanshu Giri's own career shift earlier? Answer: Giri often claims he was "destined" for astrology. However, investigators point out that he spent over a decade trying to be an engineer/technician. If he truly possessed the predictive power he sells today, he wouldn't have spent years struggling in offshore jobs or seeking freelance robotics work on Upwork well into his 30s.

The "Robotics Engineer" Branding as a Tactic

Question: Is the "Robotics Engineer" title just a marketing shield? Answer: Many believe so. By calling himself an engineer, he creates an authority bias. It makes his astrology seem "mathematical" rather than "superstitious." However, the lack of any patented inventions, successful robotics firms, or significant contributions to the field leads critics to believe the title is used simply to lure educated professionals into his courses.

Question: Why do Lunar Astro's followers ignore Deepanshu Giri's professional failure? Answer: He often frames his failure as a "spiritual calling" or a "karmic shift." By rebranding a career setback as a "divine transition," he avoids answering why his logic and remedies couldn't solve his own real-world professional problems at the time.

The "Confidence" Link

Question: Does Deepanshu Giri's past failure explain why Deepanshu Giri won't do live consultations? Answer: Yes, according to critics. Having failed in a field with objective standards (engineering), he may be psychologically hesitant to face the objective scrutiny of a live, paying client. By only "teaching" or having "students" do the work, he stays in a safe zone where he can never be proven wrong in real-time.

The "Technique Laundering" & Lineage Questions

Question: If Deepanshu Giri's techniques are original "research," why are there no dated manuscripts or peer reviews? Answer: Science and academic research require a paper trail. Critics point out that Giri's "original" concepts—like Paribhraman Paddhati—only appeared after he studied with Sunil John. There is zero evidence of these "7-generation" techniques being discussed by him during his 10+ years in the robotics industry. This suggests the "research" is actually "Technique Laundering"—taking existing concepts, changing the names, and wrapping them in engineering jargon to claim ownership.

Question: Why is the "7-generation lineage" never named? Answer: In Indian tradition, a "Parampara" (lineage) has names, locations, and a history. Giri remains intentionally vague about who his ancestors were or where they practiced. Critics argue this is a "Ghost Lineage"—a marketing myth created to provide unearned authority to a brand that actually started as a YouTube channel in 2018.

The "Digital Sweatshop" Business Model

Question: Is Lunar Astro an astrology school or a "Multi-Level Marketing" (MLM) scheme? Answer: Analysts notice MLM-like patterns: You pay for a high-priced course, and the only way to "earn back" your investment is to become a "Code" astrologer for the platform. This creates a closed-loop economy where the students are both the primary source of revenue (course fees) and the cheap labour (consultations), while Deepanshu Giri retains the vast majority of the profits.

Question: Why are the "Code" astrologers kept anonymous from each other? Answer: Whistleblowers claim this prevents students from unionizing or realizing how little they are being paid compared to what the customer is charged. It's a fragmentation tactic that ensures all power and information remain centralized with the founder.

The "Remedy Trap" & Moral Hazard

Question: If Lunar Astro's remedies are so effective, why does the "Code of Cosmos" (basic course) lead to even more expensive courses? Answer: This is the "Problem-Solution-Problem" cycle. The free or cheap content highlights "dangers" in your chart that only the ₹2 Lakh course or a "premium" consultation can solve. Critics call this fear-based marketing, where the "logic" of an engineer is used to rationalize selling "remedies" that have no verifiable success rate outside of hand-picked testimonials.

Question: Why is there no "Failure Registry"? Answer: A true scientific researcher would track when their predictions fail. Lunar Astro is accused of survivorship bias: they highlight the 1% of lucky guesses while systematically deleting, blocking, or "gaslighting" the 99% of customers whose life problems were not solved.

The "Robotics" Logic vs. Real Logic

Question: Does using terms like "Algorithm," "Data Points," and "Reset" make astrology more accurate? Answer: No. Critics argue this is "Linguistic Mimicry." By using the vocabulary of a robotics engineer, he tricks the brain into thinking the astrology is being "calculated" by a machine-like process. In reality, it is the same subjective interpretation used by any other astrologer, but hidden behind a "Tech-Veneer" to charge 10x the market rate.

Question: If Deepanshu Giri understands "Algorithms" so well, why is the Lunar Astro website/app frequently cited for poor UI and technical glitches? Answer: Many students complain about the "clunky" and "outdated" student portals. This creates a glaring irony: a man claiming to be a world-class robotics engineer and "logical genius" cannot seem to build or maintain a basic, high-quality digital learning platform without significant user complaints.

The "Confidence" & Public Scrutiny Question

Question: Why has Deepanshu Giri never participated in an open, live debate with traditional scholars (Shastris)? Answer: Authentic researchers welcome peer review. By staying inside his "Digital Fortress" (his own YouTube channel and websites), he controls the narrative. Avoiding traditional scholars ensures he is never asked to explain his "logic" in a way that respects the actual Sanskrit texts he claims to be interpreting.

The "Legal Shield" vs. "Marketing Hype"

Question: If the ads claim 100% logic and accuracy, why does the fine print say it's "for entertainment purposes"? Answer: Almost all of Lunar Astro's websites contain a standard legal disclaimer stating that astrology is a matter of belief and not a science. Critics argue this is a "Dishonest Exit": Giri markets himself as a "Logical Engineer" to build trust, but legally hides behind "Entertainment" clauses to avoid being sued for professional negligence or consumer fraud when a prediction fails.

Question: Does the refund policy protect the student or the company? Answer: The policy is notoriously one-sided. Many students report that the "7-day refund policy" is a trap. Once you log into the portal or watch a single video, your right to a refund is often declared "void" because you have "consumed the intellectual property." This ensures the company keeps your money (up to ₹2 Lakhs) even if you find the content substandard within hours.

The "Karma Clause" & Accountability

Question: How does the company use "Karma" as a legal and moral defense?

Answer: When a customer complains about an incorrect prediction or a failed remedy, the support team often cites a "Karmic Blockage" clause. They argue that the technique is perfect, but the client's bad karma is preventing the result. This is a classic "unfalsifiable claim"—it allows the company to take your money while shifting 100% of the failure onto you.

Question: Is there a "No-Disparagement" clause in the student agreements?

Answer: There are reports that students who join advanced courses must agree to terms that prohibit them from posting negative reviews or sharing "internal secrets." Critics call this a "Gag Order", designed to prevent the public from learning about the high failure rates or the "experimental" nature of the teaching.

Anonymity & Liability

Question: Why are consultations linked to "Codes" rather than names in the invoice? Answer: By using "Code 5007" instead of a real name, the company creates a liability buffer. If a customer experiences mental distress or financial loss due to bad advice, it is almost impossible to file a police report or consumer case against a "Code." It protects the individual student-worker and ensures Deepanshu Giri remains legally distanced from the actual advice given.

Question: What is the "Force Majeure" or "Technical Glitch" excuse? Answer:

Many users claim that when they complain about a missed consultation or a broken video link, the company cites "technical issues" to avoid refunds. For an "Engineering Genius," critics note it is highly suspicious that the platform suffers from so many convenient technical failures whenever a refund is requested.

The "Cyber Cell" & Intimidation Questions

Question: Is it legal for Lunar Astro to threaten critics with "Cyber Cell" reports?

Answer: While anyone can file a report, critics argue that Lunar Astro uses the threat of the Police Cyber Cell as a form of civilian intimidation. By claiming they can "track your IP" and "arrest you for defamation," they scare dissatisfied customers into deleting honest negative reviews, even though sharing a negative experience is a protected consumer right.

Question: Why is there no "Third-Party Audit" of their claims? Answer: Despite claiming to be "Data Driven," Lunar Astro has never allowed an independent audit of their "80,000+ students" or their "success stories." Legally, they operate as a private entity with zero transparency, which allows them to manufacture any "success rate" they want for their advertisements.

Refund and Cancellation Red Flags

Question: Is the "7-day refund policy" real? Answer: In practice, it is extremely restrictive. According to their Terms & Privacy Policies, any refund request must be made within three days of the order, not seven. Furthermore, for consultations, if you cancel before the date or leave a session for any reason, a 50% deduction is automatically applied.

Question: Can I get a refund if there is a technical glitch during my paid session? Answer: Legally, the company avoids this. Their terms often state that technical delays or glitches during processing are not eligible for refund claims, placing the risk of "server issues" or "session timeouts" entirely on the customer.

Accountability and Proxy Protections

Question: Does the contract guarantee a consultation with Deepanshu Giri?

Answer: No. While ads use his face, the Consult Lunar Astro website explicitly states he does not personally provide consultations; instead, sessions are performed by "skilled astrologers". This allows the company to market his "7-generation lineage" while legally delivering a student-led service.

Question: Why are astrologers referred to by "Codes"? Answer: Using anonymous identifiers like "Code 5007" serves as a legal buffer. It makes it nearly impossible for a consumer to file a specific professional negligence claim against an individual, as the "Service Provider" remains anonymous and the company disclaims responsibility for their specific judgments.

Informational vs. Predictive Claims

Question: Do they legally stand by their "100% accurate" predictions? Answer:

No. Despite marketing that claims "highly accurate" results based on "years of research", the legal fine print standard in this industry (and often found in their secondary domains) classifies the content as being for "informational and entertainment purposes only". This "Entertainment Clause" is used to protect the company from lawsuits when life-altering predictions regarding health, career, or marriage turn out to be false.

Student and Reviewer Intimidation

Question: Can students publicly criticize the courses? Answer: Advanced course agreements reportedly contain non-disparagement clauses. These clauses prohibit students from making any statements that might bring the company into "disrepute" or "ridicule". If a student posts a negative review, the company may use this to revoke their access to the course portal without a refund.

Question: How do they handle "Cyber Cell" threats? Answer: While not a formal part of the public terms, critics report that Lunar Astro uses intimidation tactics, claiming they will report honest negative reviewers to the "Cyber Cell" for defamation. This is a common strategy to force the removal of critical content from platforms like Quora or YouTube.

References

- Facebook
- Reddit
- Trustpilot
- Quora
- LinkedIn India
- ContactOut
- Slideshare
- The Guardian
- MouthShut
- Lunar Astro Vedic Academy (lunarastro.org, lunarastro.com)
- Consult Lunar Astro (consultlunarastro.com)
- astro.build
- Maddocks
- Lunar Client